Sax City

- Sax is located on the south face of a large rock that is crowned by a unique castle that defines the urban profile of the municipality.
- It forms part of the Alto Vinalopó region and limits with Elda, Petrer, Castalla, Biar, Villena and Salinas. With an area of 63 km² and an altitude of 471 meters above sea level, Sax has been a strategic communications hub since ancient times.
- It was crossed by Roman roads, by Arab roads and by Christian routes.
- It is currently located between the axis of communications between the coast and the central Spain plateau. Both the Autovía del Mediterráneo and the railway linking Madrid with Alicante take advantage of this natural corridor of the Vinalopó.

TOURISM IN SAX

GASTRONOMY

The local gastronomy is presented by dishes such as sajeño gazpachos, rice, stuffing balls, fasting stuffing, chopped wheat, whipped gachamiga, cod borreta and brothy rice. The sausages made in the town's butcher shops are also of high quality.

THE CASTLE

Rocky castle that rises on a limestone ridge to the right of the Vinalopó River, reaching a height of 500 meters above sea level, and dominating the Villa, which extends to its sunny side.

PARTY

Moors and Christians in honor of San Blas, recalling the reconquest of Sax by the troops of Jaime I in 1239, have become the most important and well-known festivals in the town.
